5 Customer

Your own understanding of customer satisfaction will be far enough if every one of your employees remains moved in the Dark Ages. Every employee should be made aware of your own (and your company's) responsibility to the customer. If you've been in business for a while, you've already seen your share of cases where the customer's problem was resolved, but the customer was still unhappy. The most common cause of this potentially fatal malady is employees (or owners) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from the customer's concerns. It's up to you to make certain that all of your employees understand that the ultimate goal of your combined efforts is a satisfied customer, not just a sale.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

No one is closer to your customers and their opinions than your own employees. Acknowledgment and respect for their contributions by their bosses is a powerful tool for gaining their contributions to the operation. Workers who are respected by their bosses are more likely to contribute their ideas to the operation. If you

You treat the important

...begins the transaction between the phone... in understanding the... always answered... or herself by nam... more than a few... a customer on hold for... the most certain way to alienate... those than... the caller... If you can't find the information you need within a minute or less, volunteer to call the customer back. And always, ALWAYS, call the customer back when you have promised to do so. Even if you haven't been able to find all the information you need, don't force the customer to wait for a call that never comes.

5 Train every employee to be an important member of the Customer Satisfaction Team.

Your own understanding of the importance of customer satisfaction will be the first step if even one of your employees remains indifferent in the Dark Ages. Every employee should be made aware (and be continuously reminded) that "fixing" the customer is just as important as fixing the customer's problem. The most common cause of this potentially fatal malady is employees (or here) who have allowed themselves to become isolated from the customer's concerns. It is your ultimate goal of your combined efforts is a satisfied customer who will be the first to buy from you.

7 Make sure that you treat the telephone as an important business tool.

Your customer experience with your store begins the exact moment that one of your employees answers the phone. Make sure that your telephone is always answered and respect the time that everyone identifies himself or herself by name. Never allow it to ring more than three or four times. Have a customer on hold for more than a minute or two and you are sure to lose the customer. And always, ALWAYS, call the customer back when you have promised to do so. Even if you haven't been able to find all the information you need, don't leave the customer to wait for a call that never comes.

8 Don't overlook your employees as a source of ideas to improve your operation.

No one is closer to your customers and their operations than your own employees. Acknowledgment and recognition are the most powerful tools for gaining suggestions and improvements from employees. Think of the ideas that your employees are contributing to your business as the ideas that will make your business a more successful one. If you are a small independent business, you should have a program that makes it a habit to ask your employees for ideas. The power of the idea is often in the hands of the employee who has the idea.

6 Don't make a mistake, own it.
